Rockwell Automation offers a wide range of first class industrial automation training courses. Our courses have been designed to meet the complete range of training needs, from production and maintenance through to high level programming and system design.

With fully qualified and experienced instructors each with practical experience and industry knowledge, you can be assured that our courses will meet with your requirements. All courses are interactive, involving delegates with hands-on exercises.

On-site and Regional training courses can be arranged for groups of six or more students. This can be a cost effective training solution particularly for customers who are not located near a major city and cannot afford the costly travel and accommodation expenses often associated with sending staff to training courses. For those companies with small teams, self-paced computer-based training can be of assistance. There are a wide range of courses available, which can be completed at a students own pace and location. Please visit our website or contact us for further details.
